Her Home And Child

A popular actress has given up a successful vaudeville career for motherhood and the home.

"Don't let's talk about art," she said as she prepared for her final appearance. "What's compared to the home? I have a home and a baby. Applause is mine today; tomorrow it goes to somebody else. But my home and my baby are mine indeed, and they are the things worth while in life."

A wise head and a true heart. The woman who has a home and a baby has her career cut out for her by the Almighty.

She has the true gold, and can well afford to give up for it the glittering tinsel.

It must seem fine to a talented woman to be able to sway the feelings of vast audiences with her song. But it must be infinitely finer for her to soothe her own little one to sleep with a lullaby.

Riplies and roars of applause must be sweet. But the lispings of a woman's own child must be immeasurably sweeter.

True there is a place on the stage and in business and in the professions for women. Hundreds of thousands of them in this country are making good in public life, as teachers, stenographers, nurses, clerks, actresses, doctors and even lawyers. And none would bar or hinder them. They are faithfully and efficiently performing noble service to humanity.

But few of them have homes and babies.

The woman who has these and properly cherishes them needs have no envy of her more strenuous and seemingly more brilliant sisters.

Here is the jewel of great price. She may think sometimes that life is dull and drudging. But so do the others far oftener perhaps than she. So, alas, do all of us.

But if there is anything that, more than all else, lifts us in this life to true purposes, sets us in tune with the infinite, and gives us foretaste of heaven, it is that little corner in God's creation we call home.

The woman with a ribboned and scented dog hugged to her heart may imagine she knows love.

The woman living in the elegantly appointed hotel may think she knows luxury.

The woman in the childless mansion may think she knows wealth.

The woman who has no cares may think she knows happiness.

But the woman in her own home with her own child at her breast, knows all these, and knows them better than all others do.

The home may be humble, but it is her home.

The child may be a care, but it is her child.

And in all these ages since woman was created for motherhood, woman nature has not changed in this respect one whit.

One of the greatest crimes possible against mankind is committed when a home is broken up by outside forces. Lives torn from accustomed moorings, and without chart or compass, are set adrift upon an unknown, cruel sea. The sea is black with rotting hulks broken in the sundering of family ties and the crushing of the holy influences of home.

Deer Farm For Wayne.

Bunnie Bates, of Wayne county, has established a deer farm at Steubenville. Forty acres of land has been fenced with a high wire netting, sufficiently high and strong to keep the animals from escaping. Four deer have been placed on the ranch. They are the black tail species and were secured from a game preserve in Wisconsin.

PAINT LICK.

The village of Paint Lick was visited Tuesday night by the greatest flood that ever occurred in its history. Our oldest citizens tell us of a flood that occurred on July 5, 1897, that was likely greater, but this was before there was a village here. This place was built up since 1858, when the L. & N. railroad was built through this section. There was a flood in 1854 and in 1882 and 1884, but none of these did the damage to the town the present one did. The flood of Tuesday washed out the county iron bridge that cost the two counties about $3,000, and it now lies torn from its base, one-half near its site and the other away down the creek in all sorts of shape. Half of the structure may be used again. The railroad bridge above the town extends down with broad iron sides to such an extent as to throw the current over on the Garrard side. This caused the water to overflow the business portion of the town and residences. The first to suffer loss was Burnam & Rucker's lumber yard. The lumber was scattered all over the town, some washing entirely away. This firm also lost a car-load of cement in their warehouse. The house of George Conn was flooded to the depth of four feet. The family had to wade out of the water waist deep.

The merchants that suffered most of any was the firm of Fish & Hammond, whose loss was about $2,000. The water rose three or four feet in their store and the goods down on the floor were damaged and the clothing hanging on racks, was also greatly damaged.

Treadway & Woods' store was flooded to the depth of six inches or a foot and their loss will reach about $800.

The flood entered the drug store of J. M. Metcalf and the Peoples' Bank, but did little damage. The residences near the stream and on low ground suffered severely. Mrs. A. B. Ely's house was flooded almost to the second story. The family had to wade out to save their lives. The residence of Guy Rice was covered with water to the depth of a foot or more and the contents of the basement were ruined. His lively stable did not escape the high waters. A tenant house below the Rice house, occupied by Jim Holman, his wife and seven children. They, to escape the rising water, went up to the second story, but the house seemed likely to be swept away at any moment. Dr. W. L. Carman, U. M. Burgess, G. Metcalf, the heroes of the occasion, tied a rope to a tree near an upper window and held the other end near the railroad track. Then holding to the rope, they swam to the house, put the frightened children on their backs and in their arms and brought them safely to shore. Dr. Carman suffered from cramp, which endangered his life for awhile. But he was a hero, for all that and did not want to give up. Out Hammond said he could not swim good, but held the lantern for the rescuers to do their heroic work in saving the perishing.

Polly Thomas' house on the Madison side, a log cabin, was swept away with all its contents. The family barely escaped with their lives.

The railroad track on the Garrard side was washed out and delayed the trains for many hours. Quite a number of citizens from both sides came to view the havoc the flood had wrought. We hope the two county judges will meet at once and have our iron bridge replaced as soon as possible. Our school closed three days because of the accident to the bridge and high waters.

Prof. G. L. Waterbury was out with his camera making pictures of the flood wreckage, etc., in and around the village.

Poor Roads Indicted.

A writer in Farm and Fireside declares that only 18,000,000 out of the 25,000,000 children of the United States go to school. This leaves 7,000,000 children without the advantage of the education that we boast is free to all.

Half of these 7,000,000 children who cannot go to school live in the country, and the principal reason they cannot secure an education is "bad roads." That is the worst indictment yet made against the poor roads of this country. The schoolhouse there, the teachers are employed and yet 3,500,000 children cannot secure that most important thing of all—an education.

"Many children," says the Magazine writer, "are killed each year walking on the railroad tracks to school. Why? They have no roads to walk on."

"Many children each year have no schools to go to. Why? The roads are so bad there is no profit in farming, no money for schools, no progress, no growth, no ambition."

"Hundreds of thousands of children yearly have to go with a little schooling, a little part of a term at school—why? Because father needs their help on the farm—he isn't making money enough to spare his children's time for school days, because he has to pay so much for hauling his crops to market he has no profit left for extra hired help."

We have a few sets of pure aluminum ware left. It is free. D. B. McKinney.

Ready For Emergency.

A commercial traveler at a railroad station in one of our Southern towns included in his order for breakfast two boiled eggs. The old darkey who served him brought him three.

"Uncle," said the traveling man, "why in the world did you bring me three boiled eggs? I only ordered two."

"Yes, sir," said the old darkey, bowing and smiling. "I know you did or der two, sir, but I brought three, 'cause I jes naturally felt dat one of dem eggs mought fail you, sir!"

Growth Of The Telephone.

The rapid growth of the telephone is shown in the annual report of the American Telephone Company, which gives the operations of the Bell telephone system in this country. It seems but a few years since the telephone was regarded as a curiosity; its use to be indulged in only by the wealthy. Now it is regarded as an indispensable part of both business and social life. To be without a 'phone now means to be almost out of either.

During 1912 the number of telephone stations increased 825,449, running the total up to 7,556,076, in 70,000 cities, towns and hamlets. How account of them is kept is a wonder, but it is stated that there were nearly eight and a half billion conversations over the American during the year, a number almost inconceivable, and proving the general use into which the telephone has come. There are 5,500 more telephone stations than postoffices, and nearly 1,000 more than the number of railroad stations in this country.

The United States is a greater user of telephones than any other country, having a traffic larger by three-fifths than all Europe, which seems to prefer the slow post, which is used more than twice in amount than in this country.

From the very short lines of a decade or so ago, the telephone now stretches across the continent, and conversations can be held from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It does not now seem possible ever to have done business without the telephone, which has also added greatly to the social life both in the town and in the country. The luxury of yesterday is the necessity of today, and most people would now give up almost anything else if it were necessary to the keeping of the telephone.—W. P. Walton in Lexington Herald.

The Secret of Honest Values

A number of years ago, in looking over business conditions, we came to the conclusion that our greatest asset was not our stock in trade or cash in the bank, but our customers' good will, our reputation for good values and square dealing. We determined to make the name "Cldham" stand as a synonym for "QUALITY"—to stand back of our goods and to see that the goods we sold were right. In studying our sources of supply, we found that some makers did business that way too; and some did not. But the ones we could rely on were the ones who put their NAMES in their goods and said always "These are ours, we made them, they're right and we will stand behind them."

State University News.

(By G. C. Wilcox.) The Dramatic Club of State University, which gave its first performance of "Lost Paradise" at the Lexington Opera House March 14, will give another performance at Louisville Friday, Mar. 28. The cast, selected from the best material in the University, gave a splendid performance here to a large crowd. It is expected that they will be well supported in Louisville.

State will have a dual track meet with Vanderbilt some time in May. Arrangements have been made and it will be one of the biggest events of the season. State usually has some mighty strong men.

The base ball outlook at present looks a little gloomy. State has a deficiency in batteries. The pitchers as yet are not showing such good form. Jim Parks, of Richmond, last year's twirler, is not allowed to play. Everybody will miss "Jimmy" on the mound. After a little practice, the blue and white hope to turn out a winning team. Dr. Tigert, director of athletics, has not yet secured an assistant coach, but hopes to do so within a few days. Some big games have been scheduled, including Michigan, Marshall, Western Reserve, Miami University, Hawaii College.

Appropos Of The Present Situation.

Tennyson said: "I doubt not through the ages one increasing purpose runs, and the thoughts of man are widened by the process of the suns," but that Tennyson was an optimist is proved by this excerpt from the Western Financial Review. It is taken from a speech made by Daniel Webster before the Senate in 1833, but it sounds remarkably like those of modern times and shows that the "thoughts of men" are not so "widened" as to be noticeable to the naked eye. Webster knew men, and he evidently anticipated the future generations as well, for here is what he says:

"There are persons who constantly clamor. They complain of oppression, speculation and pernicious influence of accumulated wealth. They cry out loudly against all banks and corporations and all means by which small capitalists become united in order to procure important and beneficial results. They carry on mad hostility against all established institutions. They would choke the fountain of industry and dry all the streams. In a country of unbridled liberty, they clamor against oppression. In a country of perfect equality they would move Heaven and earth against privilege and monopoly. In a country where property is more evenly divided than anywhere else they rend the air shouting agrarian doctrines. In a country where wages of labor are high beyond parallel they would teach the laborer that he is but an oppressed slave."

The Courier-Journal's Enterprise.

As its distinguished editor, Hon. Henry Watterson was wont to say, when the Courier-Journal goes a "cat" it goes a "cat". Tuesday, on the occasion of its forty-fifth anniversary, it is issued a Southern Prosperity number which is "bigger than all our doors." It contained 192 pages of eight columns each and a grand total of 1,536 columns, each weighing almost five pounds. It was one of the largest, if not the very largest paper ever published and proves the great editorial and mechanical capacity of Kentucky's greatest newspaper. The mass of matter it contains is full of historical and commercial interest and every Kentuckian at least should have a copy and preserve it for reference, as every class of business and undertaking is illustrated and treated at length. Mr. W. N. Haldeman, the founder of the Courier-Journal, certainly has worthy successors in his enterprising sons, Gen. W. B. and Mr. Bruce Haldeman and they are to be commended on building so successfully upon their father's sure foundation. The publication of such a paper as that of Tuesday is a feat, best appreciated by the craft, who with all the friends of those great newspapers, the Courier-Journal and Times, send greetings and congratulations to all concerned.

Only The Rich Need Apply.

It is not rather odd that two such simple posts as Ambassadorships to France and Great Britain should be going to the hands of the few. The fact is that the late Ambassador Reid paid an equivalent sum for house rent that he received in salary. We are not particularly enamored of the reform. But it is time some change of conditions with respect to our Ambassadors were brought about, to the end that character and intellect may qualify to serve the nation. And is it not rather significant that President Wilson has appointed such men to these posts, who are financially unable to fill them? Is there not substantial evidence here for the difference between the rich and the poor?

In character of those sought to be our representatives?

The Arkansas Supreme Court ruled that F. M. Putrell, president of the State Senate, is the legal acting governor, thus deposing Senator Oldham. This is unwelcome news to the many friends and relatives of Mr. Oldham in this county, where he lived until twenty-five years ago. However, this does not mean that the gentleman is retired from public activities for good and all, for he is one of those who possesses a sufficient amount of merit to "come back" and remain in the lead, where he properly belongs.

ANY one thoughtful that neither water, wind nor fire caused you life or property loss while so many have suffered from those causes in the past fifty hours? And moreover you ought to be willing to help with your means those who are in such dire distress.

By Mr. Baldwin's plan each man and woman will be paid on the piece system. At the end of each week his or her board will be deducted. In addition a certain per cent, according to the amount earned, will be taken out and deposited to the earner's credit in a savings bank. So long as the blind person remains in the school this money cannot be drawn from the bank by him or her, except by the approval of the trustees of the school. In this way a fund will be created for each pupil for use in later life. Another feature which will be introduced in the school by the new superintendent is that of reading the newspapers to them. A certain hour will be designated, when all will gather in the big hall of the school and Mr. Baldwin will read the important news of the day to them. Mr. Baldwin is a native of the State of New York and was for many years connected with the educational work of the State, both as a teacher and a supervisor of schools. For several years past he has been engaged in business in Maine, but was induced to take the present position because of a lifelong interest in the work of teaching those afflicted with loss of sight.

There are high schools all over the country that cannot afford domestic science. There are many others where the girls are doing laboratory domestic science, and a large percentage of the pupils go to the corner grocery for a cheap confectionery for their noon luncheon.

The value as well as the economy of serving the children with an appetizing, inexpensive meal, scientifically prepared, is obvious. Their health is conserved and a practical course in domestic science is made possible. It is not possible to run both things at the same time by a carefully prepared course of study?

It certainly is worth thinking about, for people everywhere are looking for the school for more real every day efficiency.

Don't Get Into a Rut. A rut in the road is bad enough, but a rut in your life work is infinitely worse. Get out of the rut and come to Louisville April 30, May 1, 2 and 3, to the forty-second annual meeting of the Kentucky Educational Association.

I'll do you good to meet new faces and see some of the old ones again. I'll do you good to see and know that Kentucky is thoroughly alive educationally. I'll do you good to see over 5,000 people together who are interested in education.

If ever there, you'd want to go. If ever there, you'd want to go.

Colored High School of Owensboro Among the First to Offer Full Four Year Instruction in Household Arts, Every Girl Pupil and Several Boys Now Enrolled.

Three years ago, when very few high schools in Kentucky were offering a course in domestic science, the Colored High School at Owensboro made a beginning. The board of education there at that time, like many others in the state, was hampered by a lack of funds. The board also had before it the experience of other schools where the expense account of the domestic science course had proved quite a burden. It was a difficult problem, but the faculty of the school felt that the work could be put upon a basis that would make it almost self sustaining.

Today the Colored High School of Owensboro has a four year course in domestic science and will graduate seven girls that have taken this full course. During these four years only three girls have failed to take the course, and this year 100 per cent of the girls in the high school take domestic science. Besides these girls, it might be well to add that there are eight boys enrolled in the classes, so that the figures should really read 100 per cent plus.

A five cent dinner and lunch counter handled by the domestic science department have made this splendid work possible. The cost of material in both cooking and sewing classes has been met each year by the board of education paying a deficit of about $5 a month.

The preparation of this five cent dinner would seem to be a definite loss in some of the technical training, but it appears otherwise when one visits the school.

It appears to be of absolute value in the general training, as the girls are used in small relays, so that each girl in the school comes to this special work once a week. The class book, which is carefully kept, shows exactly the work the pupil has done each time she has been on duty for a dinner and luncheon.

If she has made biscuit and afterward cleaned the stove this week the next she will probably prepare a salad and clean the refrigerator. In the course of the school year she will have covered a certain definite amount of practical housekeeping work. There is the added value that she has prepared this food in quantities sufficient for an ordinary family, and not in laboratory quantities.

It might be urged that a high school is not a vocational school, and that our schools are not preparing girls for lunch room service. This is all true, but the greatest indictment brought against our schools today is that they do not give our boys and girls a grip on life, real, everyday things. The work in this school seems to give this and at the same time helps to sustain itself while giving all the pupils something that is wholesome to eat at a remarkably low price.

There are high schools all over the country that cannot afford domestic science. There are many others where the girls are doing laboratory domestic science, and a large percentage of the pupils go to the corner grocery for a cheap confectionery for their noon luncheon.

The value as well as the economy of serving the children with an appetizing, inexpensive meal, scientifically prepared, is obvious. Their health is conserved and a practical course in domestic science is made possible. It is not possible to run both things at the same time by a carefully prepared course of study?

It certainly is worth thinking about, for people everywhere are looking for the school for more real every day efficiency.

$50,000 A YEAR SQUANDERED???

"Teachers to Teach Teachers to Teach" Needed Today.

HEARD AT COUNTRY STORE.

Two Old Times Express Their Views on Up to Date Educational Methods and Expenses of State Normal School. "Old Fashioned" Training No Longer "Good Enough."

"Say, did you ever notice how easy it is to spend the state's money? That school, the one they call the normal school, uses about $50,000 a year, I hear. That $50,000 is for just the normal school in this end of the state too. 'Mighty different when we were boys, Bill. We didn't have to have teachers to teach teachers to teach.' The two old codgers in front of the country store shook their heads sadly over the follies and extravagance of the present day. A young man who had been industriously whittling at a stick and listening attentively at the same time laughed, and then asked, 'How much of the $50,000 does this country pay?'

"I dunno," answered one of the men. "Well, I do," snapped the youth. "A little less than $700, that's all."

"Well, what do we get back for it?" "You get the other counties in the state get for what money they put in."

"What do you number of trained teachers, and so do the other counties in the state?"

"We don't need 'em. The 'ol fashioned kind are good enough."

"Hold on a moment! Think! When you men were boys a bright youngster could go into any doctor's office for a couple of years, then hang out his shingle and practice medicine. He did the best he could, but you wouldn't think of having that sort of a physician for your family today."

"I'd like to know what that's got to do with teachin' school."

"Just this—that your ideas about school and teaching are about fifty years behind the times. If you must have a trained man to look after your child's body you certainly must have a trained man or woman to look after the child's mind."

"I get mighty tired of you youngsters with all your newfangled ideas for spending money. I tell you what, you've tried to do things too fast."

"There!" snapped the young man again. "I told you you didn't stop to think. Two years ago in front of this very store I heard both of you cuss the Boys' Corn Club movement. You said that nobody could possibly grow 100 bushels of corn on an acre of land in this neighborhood or in the state of Kentucky for that matter."

"In this state during the past summer fifty-six boys, boys in the country schools, boys yet under eighteen, grew 100 bushels or much better. Do you two men know that this movement has been handled by the very school you are fussing about? Four thousand boys in this state grew an acre of corn apiece in the Boys' Corn Club contest. I'd be willing to bet that each one of the 4,000 earned $10 more than he would have earned if there hadn't been any Boys' Corn clubs in the state. wouldn't he?"

"I reckon so."

"Well, then, 4,000 boys earning $10 each makes $40,000 for that $50,000 the state is spending on that school, don't it? Seems to me as if it was a rather good investment for the state if it does happen to be newfangled."
